cial passages by the phrase “architect or professional engineer” [underscored emphasis added]. This implies that regulatory officials should accept the work products of either, with more or less equal regard. Let's take a look at an edited excerpt from a typical example<sup>5</sup>: The Proper Use of Ohio Professional Seals

The Proper Use of Ohio Professional Seals

It was suggested by the Building Officials that the engineers' and architects' seals be more uniform so that they could easily be determined to be in compliance with the State law. The rules are also based upon language in the Model Law adopted by the National Council of Examiners for Engineering and Surveying, in an attempt to make Iowa's laws consistent with laws in other states.

Sealing & Certification Rules - Iowa Engineering Society

Engineers: For individuals registered as a Category A Professional Engineer prior to July 1, 2001, the seal will denote “Registered Professional Engineer” and the registration number (00000).
