The third edition in this series for aged care workers in Australia.

This textbook is about ageing in Australia. It is aimed at people who work in aged care, students, volunteers and older people and their carers. Its central purpose is to provide the learner with important knowledge about ageing and health care services that will enable the learner to understand the key issues facing older people, carers, workers and communities today. The book provides practical care giving skills and identifies the learners attitudes about ageing.

Fundamentals of Nursing, 2e highlights the core themes of nursing, including nurse, person, health and environment, covering the fundamental concepts, skills and standards of practice. Research and evidence-based practice issues are highlighted to help introductory nursing students prepare for delivering care for culturally diverse populations across a continuum of settings.

With up-to-date coverage of the Registered Nurse Standards of Practice (2016) and key pedagogical features such as our unique 'Spotlight on Critical Thinking' questions, this text challenges students to assess their own nursing practice and apply the concepts to real-life clinical settings. Fundamentals of Nursing presents in-depth material in a clear, concise manner using language that is easy to read and has good coverage of topics such as rural and remote nursing and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health. This text is complemented by the bestselling Tollefson, Clinical Psychomotor Skills: Assessment Tools for Nursing, which covers skills and procedures. A value pack of these two texts is available. Premium online teaching and learning tools are available on the MindTap platform.

An illustrated guide to the health needs and basic care of the elderly in Eastern Mediterranean countries, where ageing of the population is a comparatively new trend. The manual is designed for use during a simple training course for primary health care workers. Information is presented in seven self-contained modules. The first provides tips and advice on effective teaching using problem-based methods. The remaining modules outline the training needed to help primary health care workers perform a number of simple tasks, such as collecting information about the elderly in a community, recognizing the signs of common disorders and disabilities, helping to prevent accidents and injuries, and knowing when a patient must be referred to a doctor. Information on nutritional needs in the elderly, and the foods to choose or avoid, is also provided. Numerous drawings, model forms, and boxed points to remember are used to illustrate the many simple yet vital things primary health care workers can do to prevent or manage the special health problems of the elderly.

As the Baby Boomers age, concerns over healthcare systems' abilities to accommodate geriatric patients grow increasingly challenging. This is especially true with the population deemed to be "the oldest of the old," specifically those over the age of 85. Unlike any other time in history, this demographic is the fastest growing segment of most developed countries. In the United States the oldest old is projected to double from 4.3 million to 9.6 million by 2030. The increased life expectancy of the population since the early 1900s has been built on the improvement of living conditions, diet, public health and advancement in medical care. With this we have seen a steady decline in the age-specific prevalence of vascular and heart diseases, stroke and even dementia. Older persons are healthier today than their counterparts decades ago. More importantly than in any other age group, the care of the oldest old must be individualized; management decisions should be made taking into consideration the older persons' expressed wishes, quality of life, function and mental capacity. The inevitable consequence is that there will be an increase in the prevalence of older persons with chronic diseases, multiple co-existing pathologies and neuro-degenerative diseases. The oldest of the aging population are often excluded from drug trials and their treatments are largely based on findings extrapolated from that of the younger old. Furthermore, among the oldest old, physiologically they are more diverse than other segments of the population. Their demographic characteristics are unparalleled and different compared to that of the younger old. Several studies have drawn attention to the differing attitudes among health professionals towards elderly people and many show prejudice because they are old. As a result, the use of age as a criteria in determining the appropriateness of treatment is of very limited validity, yet there are limited resources that guide physicians through these challenges. This book creates a greater awareness of these challenges and offers practical guidelines for working within the infrastructures vital to this demographic. This book is designed for geriatricians, primary care physicians, junior medical officers, specialty geriatrics nurses, and gerontologists. It is divided into 3 sections: General Considerations, Chronic diseases and Geriatric Syndromes.
