Written by BT Organizational Development, this book shows how focus group research provides qualitative data on how changes in a company are affecting people and how new initiatives will be received. The data forms part of a two-way information flow enabling senior policy people and decision-makers within the company to understand the meaning behind the numbers for continuous improvement purposes.

Short, easy to read rhymes reveal what is unique about various animals, from ape to wolf.

This is a collection of Robert Graves' essays, written between 1922 and 1972, on areas of culture which engaged him. They are organized around the thematic categories of literature, history and religion. The collection chronicles Graves' intellectual development by presenting the essays chronologically to show how ideas begin and evolve over half a century. At the same time, the essays demonstrate his eclectic knowledge over a vast range of topics and confirm not only his insights, but also his humour and famous leaps of logic.

An action-packed sticker book full of ancient Roman actors, gladiators, chariot racers, politicians, schoolchildren and soldiers, which children can dress in historically accurate clothing using the 180-plus stickers provided. Also features lots of fascinating facts about life in ancient Rome, written in conjunction with an expert on the period.

This publication presents the proceedings of an OECD/NEA workshop, held in Canada in October 2002, which brought together delegates from 14 countries to discuss a range of public concerns and social considerations involved in nuclear waste management activities for local communities.
